Project Description

The U.S. Agency for International Development's Center of Excellence on Democracy, Human Rights and Governance (the DRG Center) is seeking three VSFS e-interns to work with its Learning Division on research and communication activities related to its learning agenda. The learning agenda is a set of issues and questions that development practitioners want to understand in order to do more effective work in the DRG sector. The e-interns will work closely with DRG Center staff on rigorously reviewing the literature and engagingly communicating research findings related to these questions. Interns will also have the opportunity to explore particular research topics of interest to them in consultation with DRG Center or other USAID staff who work on that topic. The learning agenda is a prominent initiative at the Agency and the work of past VSFS e-interns has been used in high-level briefings. Additionally, DRG Learning Division staff will provide high quality mentoring to the e-interns.
